ANNOUNCER: This is "Headliner" with Fred Thomas.

FRED THOMAS: Good afternoon.

Recent events throughout the country have caused many of us to reflect and challenge what is happening in our government. Trying to keep up with who's holding what office makes for a good parlor game. We have witnessed the former Vice President step down from office, and constant threats of impeaching the President.

My guest on "Headliner" today is Judith Beck Stein, who has just written a book entitled, "The Journal of Judith Beck Stein." It is not the kind of book that leaves one feeling optimistic about the country's domestic crisis.

In a moment, Miss Stein will talk about Watergate, the assassination of John Kennedy, his brother Robert, Dr. Martin Luther King, and what role her life has played in what she calls, attempts to silence millions who have been duped.

Stay with us.

THOMAS: Judy, welcome to "Headliner."

JUDITH BECK STEIN: Hi, it's nice to be here.
It's really nice.

THOMAS: "The Journal of Judith Beck Stein."
This is quite a controversial book, to put it mildly. Why did you write it?

STEIN: I felt it had to be written, Fred. I felt that everybody who's dragged their feet on the nitty gritty, the heart of the truth of Watergate -- I felt that it was the
